Results based management

RESULTS BASED MANAGEMENT (RBM)

is the way an organization applies processes and resources to achieve targeted results.

RBM consists of several elements:

Strategic orientation and coherence: RBM starts by formulating sound objectives that shift the focus from inputs and activities (how much resources to spend on the intervention) to measurable results (what can be changed in the world outside of the intervention) in a coordinated way.

Delivery planning: RBM allocates available resources to activities that will contribute most to the achievement of the desired results. A pre-condition to sound resource allocation are organizational arrangements that ensure authority and responsibilities are aligned with results and resources.

Stakeholder engagement: RBM makes use of the expertise and resources held by stakeholders in order to increase the likelihood of achieving relevant results.

Monitoring and evaluation: RBM checks whether the allocated resources are making the intended difference and feeds back the information into decision-making.

A COMMUNITY OF PRACTICE (COP)

is a group of people who share a concern or a passion for something they do and learn how to do it better as they interact regularly.

A COP is defined by three characteristics:

The domain: a CoP focuses on a shared competence that distinguishes members from other people.

The community: members of a CoP engage in joint activities and discussions, help each other and share information, building relationships that enable them to learn more about their domain.

The practice: members of a CoP are practitioners. They develop a shared repertoire of resources: experiences, stories, tools and ways of addressing recurring problems – in short a shared practice.

The Community of Practice organises regular knowledge sharing meetings, study visits, learning seminars and online discussions for its members.
